Evaluation: The two-stage exemption exam also serves as a placement test. Each stage is graded out of 100 points. In the second stage, the writing section is scored out of 50 points, and the speaking section is also scored out of 50 points. To be exempt from the preparatory education at İzmir Demokrasi University, students of the English Language Teaching and English Language and Literature departments must have an average score of 80 or higher, while students from other departments must have an average score of 70 or higher.

For example, an Architecture student who scores 75 in the first stage and 71 in the second stage will have  $75+71= 146/2 = 73$  points and will be exempt. For example, an Architecture student who scores 75 in the first stage and 60 in the second stage will have  $75+60 = 135/2 = 67.5$  points and will not be exempt, starting their education at the Intermediate level.

- Students who achieve the required score in any of the exams shown in the table above and submit their exam result documents by the end of the Add/Drop week will be exempt from preparatory education and can begin their first-year department courses.
- The exemption exam will also be used as a placement test, so it is important for students to answer the questions accordingly. It is necessary for you to take this exam to ensure you are placed in the correct level class. Students who are placed in the university with a foreign language score and do not take the exemption exam will start their education at the advanced level (Intermediate). Students from other departments who do not take the exam will start their education at the basic level (Elementary).
- Students who score at least 80 out of 100 for the English Language Teaching and English Language and Literature departments, and at least 70 out of 100 for other English-taught programs, will be exempt from the compulsory preparatory class and will begin their studies in the program they are enrolled in.
